Intervention Strategies for Frequent Disrupters Who Misbehave, Are Unmotivated & Disrespectful
PLUS, Tools to Regain & Maintain Classroom Control

Would You Like Workable Strategies to Use with Your Demanding, Unmotivated or Chronically Disruptive Students?

Typically, 35% of students in a classroom will be labeled chronically disruptive. They will behave if your staff has been given advanced knowledge to manage them. They will become more difficult with a lack of management skills. It is essential to know what to do and what never to do since such a large, misbehaving group will create chaos, stopping teaching and learning, resulting in teachers leaving the field.

Learn exact procedures and strategies to use so they become cooperative and productive. Learn how to determine every students' comfortable proximity, when to touch and where, touching without using the hands, communication without words, signals that create mutual respect. Best of all, learn how to have students enter class, going immediately to work without teacher direction! Create a productive and happy learning environment that is well organized, productive and empowers the teacher!
